

COMPANY ANNOUNCEMENT

DLP to open new London office

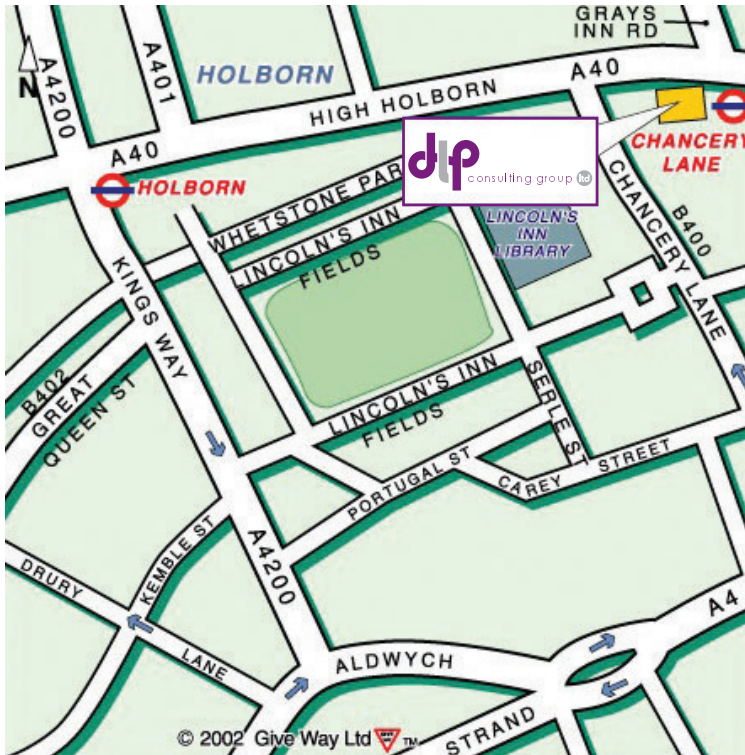

I am delighted to announce the opening of DLP Consulting Group's new Central London offices, on Monday 4th April 2011. Located in the heart of the City at High Holborn, DLP London will offer an extensive range of planning consultancy and architectural design services, building on the excellent reputation that the firm has established elsewhere in the UK and abroad.

DLP Planning Ltd's London operation will provide full planning consultancy services for a broad range of clients including housebuilders, landowners, Local Planning Authorities and community interest groups. All aspects of the planning system are covered, from land promotion through to planning applications, appeals and enforcement matters. Initially, my fellow Director, James Croucher, will be running our London planning operations, and will be happy to meet with you to discuss the wide range of professional planning assistance that we can provide for your sites across Greater London.

DLP Design Ltd's London presence will build on the existing wide range of architectural design work and masterplanning that the company is already engaged in. Urban regeneration will continue to be one of the company's specialisms across a broad range of site sizes and types, including residential, mixed-use and commercial redevelopments. Our Director of Architecture, Rob Farr, will be leading the London design team and would be glad to discuss your architectural design requirements with you.
